~ National Park Service ~

My fascination with National Parks began in fourth grade with a field trip to Effigy Mounds National Monument. Just across the Mississippi River from our home in Wisconsin, Effigy Mounds is not even a full-blown National Park but it is the first Park Service site I recall visiting. It was just the beginning. Although I haven’t visited all 59 designated National Parks in the Park Service’s 411 managed units, I’ve made a nice dent, from Acadia to Hawai’i Volcanoes. Some of the big ones, Yellowstone and Yosemite I have yet to see but I will get there. The life list continues…

In casting about a few years ago for a subject area to concentrate on as a rare book dealer I landed on National Parks. It is a fascinating combination of my former professional life in museums, training in material culture studies, and love of books and materials relating to the National Park Service.

To celebrate the centenary of its 1916 founding I offer my first catalog dedicated to the National Park Service. No one said it better than the late writer, Wallace Stegner: “National parks are the best idea we ever had. Absolutely American, absolutely democratic, they reflect us at our best rather than our worst.” I hope the material within inspires or rekindles your interest in our National Park Service and the work it does.

This catalog would not be possible without the hard work and dedication of my daughter, EvaMarie Olson. Her photography work and layout and design skills brought a collection of fairly dry descriptions to life. I cannot thank her enough.

National Park Service;
Hough, Emerson (Association)

Report of the Director of the National Parks Service to the Secretary of the Interior for the Fiscal Year Ended June 30, 1918

8vo. Pebbled brown leather cover with gold embossed titling to cover and "Mr. Emerson Hough" embossed at lower right corner of front cover, light scuffing overall. Marbled endpapers. Quite clean within. Very Good. Full Leather.

Emerson Hough (1857-1923) was an author who specialized in stories of the American West. In the 1890s he made his first trip to Yellowstone and advocated for anti-poaching laws that applied to National Parks. A longtime supporter of National Parks, and a very vocal proponent of the establishment of the National Park Service in 1916, it is likely that this was presented to Emerson by National Park Service Director Stephen Mather in appreciation for his ongoing National Park Service Support. (#27687) $700.00

Runte, Alfred

National Parks: The American Experience

Williams, Terry Tempest

The Mural Project

The first publication of Ansel Adams’ Mural Project for the Department of the Interior. Adams was commissioned to photograph the Western national parks in 1941 & 1942, but World War II put the project on hold and it was not taken back up after the war. It wasn’t until this publication that the photographs were made available for viewing by the general public. (#27876) $20.00
Horace Albright was an important part of the early success of the establishment of the National Park Service (NPS). What was left out of much of the early histories of the NPS was the first Director, Stephen Mather’s struggle with manic depression and Albright’s role in stepping in to make sure that the NPS moved forward and the truth about Mather’s illness was not known.

Hartzog, Jr., George B.; Udall, Stewart L. (Introduction) Battling for the National Parks

Signed boldly by the author in the year of publication. Inscribed and signed second time in the following year.

George B. Hartzog, Jr. (1920-2008) was the seventh Director of the National Park Service and served from 1964-1972 until he was dismissed under pressure from President Richard Nixon over a dispute over Hartzog’s cancellation of a special use permit of a friend of Nixon’s. Outspoken, Hartzog led the NPS through a great deal of expansion, including many urban parks.

King, Clarence

Mountaineering in the Sierra Nevada

New York: Charles Scribner’s Sons, 1902.

Clarence King (1842-1901) was a prominent geologist who was involved a number of surveys in the American West, many centering around Yosemite and the Sierra Nevadas. In an unbelievable twist, King spent the final thirteen years of his life passing as an African-American Pullman porter and under the name James Todd entered into a common law marriage with an African-American woman, Ada Copeland. Despite his light complexion and blue eyes, he convinced her he was African-American as well and together they had five children. He did not reveal to her his true identity and racial background until he wrote her a letter as he lay dying of tuberculosis in Phoenix, Arizona. ($25113) $35.00

James Mason Hutchings of Yosemite: A Biography and Bibliography

Born in England, James Mason Hutchings (1820-1902) immigrated to the United States in 1848 and a year later ventured west during the California Gold Rush. A successful miner, he lost his fortune, and in 1855 led the second excursion of tourists into what would become Yosemite National Park (1890). Hutchings settled in the Yosemite Valley but was made to leave the Park in 1875 due to his legal challenges to the State of California by continuing to build structures on land he no longer owned, having been compensated for property he had claimed once it became a State Park in 1864. Throughout his long life, Hutchings remained a promoter of Yosemite and its natural wonders, both through his hotels and publication, “Hutchings’ Illustrated California Magazine.” Published in an edition of 500 copies, this is also the 225th publication of The Book Club of California. Yosemite and the Mariposa Grove: A Preliminary Report, 1865

An elegant fine press edition of Frederick Law Olmsted’s original report, read at a camp in Yosemite before the first Yosemite Commission in August of 1865, that called for the establishment of a national park that preserved the Yosemite Valley and the Mariposa Grove of giant sequoia. Olmsted’s recommendation would not come to fruition for another 25 years when Yosemite National Park was established on October 1, 1890. Produced in an edition of 450 copies, this is copy #156; copies #151-450 were not signed by Ramney or Thiebaud. (#27721) $125.00

Norris, Philetus W.

Annual Report of the Superintendent of the Yellowstone National Park to the Secretary of the Interior for the Year 1880

First Edition. 64 pp. 8vo. Gray paper wraps with small tear at lower right corner of front cover, minor soiling. Two folding plates, first tipped in as frontispiece and is an illustrated bird’s eye view of Mammoth Hot Springs; second plate map tipped in at rear and is a “Map of the Yellowstone National Park with the Adjacent Hoodoo Region.” Both maps are clean, bright, and free of tears. Very Good. Wraps.

Philetus W. Norris (1821-1885) was the second superintendent of Yellowstone National Park who served in that capacity from 1877 to 1882. Norris is best remembered for the extensive roadbuilding undertaken in the park under his tenure, he was also active post-superintendency in promoting Yellowstone National Park and the West.

An early description of the park its environs, geological and natural history observations, it is also important for the two plates that complement the text. (#27966) $525.00
